Chapter 1 by Maeghyn Shoemaker

I had just woken up from a long nap and i heard scurrying footprints,paper shuffling at the front door and the door bell ringing. I'm all alone, Because my parents had gone interstate for a funeral and i managed to convince them that i'm seventeen years old and DO NOT need a babysitter! My heart was skipping beats, i wish i wouldn't of been so stubborn and just agreed to go to Aunt Eva's house. Being the brave person i am, i tried my best to go back to bed and just forget anything had happened, but now the house seems to be to be surrounded by undefeatable noises. After 15 minutes i decided that i had to get up, I walked down the flight of stairs as quiet as i could and when i got to the main floor i tip toed to the door, if someone was still out there i didn't want them to be able to hear me.i notice something had slid in from the mail slot on my front door, i bend over and picked up the stained envelope and trace each letter on the front with my finger. The letter looked old, but it was addressed to me. I ran back up the stairs and back into my room. I quickly slammed the door and locked it, then i checked all the windows to make sure they were all locked. Before i closed the blinds i quickly flicked on the lights. I turned on my desk light and sat down and examined the note, it looked old. And the handwriting on the front looked like it was written by a 5th grader i traced over the letters. I recognizing his handwriting. It's my own. The note i wrote when i was young but the thing is i threw this note away. i burned it. I don't know why i wrote it.

There's no signs of burnt marks, it looks brand new. The ink looks as if it was just written. the thing about this letter is I gave this to a boy I liked then he gave it back all crumbled up, then I burned it. How is it back already? Why is it back? Who brought it back? Who the heck slipped it through the mail slot? So many questions swirled around inside. I felt sick eventually. Why was this happening?
